The Douro River cuts a 200-mile path through rugged wilderness along the Spanish frontier and through one of the world's most beautiful and prolific wine regions as it winds through Portugal toward Porto on the Atlantic. Along the way, it passes castle ruins hidden in the hills. Disembark in the town of Pocinho for a choice of three excursions: a visit to the Museum of Art and Archaeology of the Côa Valley, where striking exhibits showcase Paleolithic rock art discovered in the 1990s during preparations for a Côa River dam; a vigorous hike through the Upper Douro countryside; or a guided walking tour of Torre de Moncorvo, with time to explore its historic streets, local museums, and culinary traditions. Day 6: Régua (Portugal)

Its historic role in the production of port wine is written on the landscapes you'll see today when you step off the boat into Peso da Régua for a day of discovery. An important transport junction, this is where barrels of wine were boarded onto traditional rabelos bound for Gaia in the 18th century, where the wine was aged in local lodges. This morning, you have a choice of a visit to the Douro Museum, set within the restored Casa da Companhia Velha building, once part of Real Companhia Velha (Royal Oporto Wine Company), chartered in 1756. On your guided visit to the museum, you'll explore its exhibits chronicling the history, culture and traditions of the Douro River Valley region, from the cultivation of grapes on the vines to the processes involved in the production of Port wine and its distribution around the world. Alternatively, visit the historic town of Lamego (dating back to the Middle Ages), renowned for its viticulture and production of sparkling wine. Or, if you choose, join a local guide for a visit to a local wine-making estate called a quinta, rewarding with a port cocktail making class. Return to the riverboat late day.

The wine growing regions of the Douro surprise visitors with an array of vintages, young and old. Green refers to its age not its color; the grapes they use for these wines are typically consumed within three to six months after bottling and can be red, white, or rosé. For those who would like a more active activity, a short coach ride this morning brings you to Arouca Geopark, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, for a very active hike across the 516 Arouca Bridge. Measuring in at 1,693 feet long and 575 feet high, the 516 Arouca Bridge connects the banks of the Paiva River and is the world's longest suspended pedestrian bridge (note: guests choosing this excursion will not visit the Vinho Verde winery). Chart a course for Porto this afternoon, and enjoy the chef's signature dinner onboard your ship tonight.
